MOOD:  dorky

MUSIC: Autamata - Skimming Stones

This whole adding one more time commitment thing to an already packed schedule takes, well. Time.

I remember sleep.

Ohhh, sleep.

Well, at least I got my laundry done.

Three things!

Yes, baking with your hands is more fun. And the results have a better texture, and taste better.

DON'T get him started.

Oh, look. More autopsy reports. Where do you want these, Your Harpyness?

Circular file next to my desk.

Just email them to me. I'll get to them after the North Carolina thing. (I can't stop Dad from requesting them, but I can downprioritize them under things that might actually be, you know, pressing matters of life or death.)

I dunno. The new kitteh is cute, but damned if he hasn't discovered how to knock down plants, and now I've got dirt all over my floor, and a plant that needs re-potting in the Copious Spare Time I haven't got. Maybe I'm trying to empirically test whether spider plants are actually indestructible. Yeah. That's it.

New Kitteh also thinks my desk is fascinating, oh what's this glowing thing you're staring at, stands on the keyboardjjjjjjjjjjjjj, which makes it hard to get work done.

Frankly, the boy is probably better off with a girlfriend.

(As to sleep--- I still haven't decided whether not sleeping, which I've done too much of in the past, or sleeping from 2p to midnight, which I'm doing right now, is worse. At least the laundry machines are usually free between 3a and 8a, which was how I spent this morning.)

Hey, at least you won't have me wanting to take you to dinner. My dream job evaporated.

Oh, SUCK!

I am so sorry.

Is there anything else on the horizon, at least?

The place in (whisper) LA that I liked so much--they said they're going to decide by the end of next week. I believe the word I'm looking for is "WAUGH!"

As long as you're having fun, I think those of us out in Internets Land won't mind too much.

So far so good, I mean.
